Shanghai Riots Are Attributed To Communists

Shoot-To-Kill Orders Issued To Police; Dozens Of Shops Reopen

SITUATION BELIEVED TO BE UNDER CONTROL

100 Injured In Outbreak Following Arrest Of Unlicensed Peddlers

SHANGHAI, Monday, Dec. 2. (AP)—Dozens of Shanghai shops reopened this morning as well-armed foot and motorized patrols—with shoot-to-kill orders—guarded against any resumption of bloody weekend rioting which city officials blamed upon Communists.

Many stores, however, still were closed and tightly shuttered, with their proprietors evidently fearful of further violence.

The day began quietly, and at mid-morning a municipal spokesman said "we think we have the situation under control."

At least 100 were reported injured and many shops, automobiles and street cars were wrecked in fighting which flared after the wholesale arrest Saturday of unlicensed sidewalk peddlers. The spokesman reiterated today previous official reports that none had been killed, although rumors had listed five to dead.

Mayor Goes On Air
In an emotion-choked radio address last night, Shanghai's Princeton-educated Mayor K. C. Wu, ordinarily suave and serene, announced he had ordered police to shoot and slay anyone disturbing the peace or carrying unauthorized arms. He said no one had yet been killed, despite assorted reports to the contrary.

One unconfirmed report said seven were dead, but the Mayor insisted that all death reports were incorrect.

Firing continued frequently through the day and night, with the police station the favorite target of snipers, but most of the mob relied on bricks, stones, bottles and all other portable objects as weapons.

The Mayor appealed to all places of business to reopen Monday. Most were closed yesterday under threat of the riot leaders to smash them if they opened.

We announced that the Woonung garrison had been placed in a state of emergency and that martial law—never repealed since the liberation—was being strictly invoked for the first time.

Rifle-bearing members of the peace-keeping corps patrolled the tense streets, in which the unlicensed peddlers were broken by intermittent gunfire. Regular troops had not yet been called in.

Communists Held Responsible
The Mayor laid foreign correspondents flatly that he held the Communist underground responsible for the outbreak and said they were terrorists whose sole aim was to destroy the peace and security of this greatest city in China.

Washington Woman Is Slashed To Death
WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Mrs. Carrie L. Davidson, 72, apartment owner and manager, was found stabbed to death today in the living room of her apartment, 317 Third street, S. E.

Robert J. Barrett, chief of detectives, said the woman had been stabbed several times in the chest and arms with a letter opener. He said robbery was the apparent motive for the slaying.

Police said Mrs. Davidson probably was killed sometime between 10:30 Saturday morning and 2:30 a. m. Sunday.

INAUGURATED—Miguel Aleman, above, became the first clearly civilian president of Mexico yesterday. He pledged adherence to a "good neighbor policy" and vowed to "fight for continental unity."

Aleman Becomes Mexico's Chief Executive At 43

Adherence To "Good Neighbor Policy" Pledged By New President

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1 (AP)—Miguel Aleman became the first clearly civilian president of Mexico today, pledging adherence to a "good neighbor policy" and vowing to "fight for continental unity."

He had risen in 16 years from the Department of Agriculture where he was a lawyer to attain the highest office of the land at the age of 43. He succeeded Manuel Avila Camacho, who with his predecessors were military men or temporary commanders with regimes based on armies.

Six-Year Term
Aleman was inaugurated for a six-year term before 3,500 persons including representatives of the United States and 38 other nations. The largest delegation was from Argentina.

"We sustain the conviction that in order to resolve the problems of our immediate future, we must fight for continental unity as an aspiration of democratic and free nations," Aleman said. "The doctrine of the good neighbor coincides with the sentiment of our people and, entered into a form of permanent policy, satisfies our ideals of international understanding."

The new president recommended that Congress grant women's suffrage in municipal elections, a law approved by a majority of states but not yet enacted.

States Government's Aim
He declared that the 13,000,000 Mexicans had a sub-standard of living and recommended spending $300,000,000 during his term to bring 3,500,000 more acres into production.

Aleman said the "decided aim" of his government was:

"Free local government, sovereignty of federal entities, respect for the interdependence of (governmental) powers, strengthening of individual guarantees, protection of human life and of the liberties of politics, thought, belief and press."

Government May Expand Its "Voice Of America"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The State Department is considering plans to revamp and expand its "Voice of America" shortwave broadcasts to foreign countries, government officials disclosed today.

One proposal now ready for study by Secretary of State Byrnes would turn the entire broadcasting job over to a government-financed foundation controlled by private American citizens.

Officials said if the program is approved, Congress will be asked to appropriate additional funds to increase the number of broadcasts and boost the power of the 37 transmitters now being used in the United States.

Ball Says Mine Strike Is "Defiance" Of Law

"More Like Insurrection Than Labor Dispute," Senator Asserts; Lewis Blamed For Walkout

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Sen. Ball (R-Minn.) said today the soft coal strike was in "defiance" of the War Labor Disputes Act and that, in his opinion, it was "more like insurrection than a labor dispute."

He said the strike amounted to "a minority group of 400,000 challenging the sovereignty of the United States."

Sen. Ball made his statements on a CBS "People's Platform" network broadcast during a debate with Eugene Cotton, assistant CIO general counsel.

Cotton replied that "the issue is one of economics, not one of fighting over legal technicalities," and added:

"The least you can accord to the miners is the right to strike for what they feel they need, when you accord to industry the right to strike for what it thinks it needs to continue production."

Defiance of Court Order
Cotton evidently was referring to the action of certain industries in holding out against governmental recommendations until price increases were permitted.

Ball declared:

"I don't think the coal strike is a labor dispute in any true sense of the word. It is a defiance of a law passed by Congress—the War Labor Disputes Act. It is also a defiance of an order to enforce that law issued by a federal court. That's more like insurrection than a labor dispute in my opinion."

Ball maintained that the miners, members of the United Mine Workers Union, headed by John L. Lewis, were not polled to determine whether they wished to strike, and asserted:

"The strike was due far more to the desire of Mr. Lewis to become a dominant figure in the labor movement than to any economic reason."

"It's a tradition that the miners always quit when Mr. Lewis gives the signal. Three times during the war the miners blindly followed Lewis in strikes which definitely injured the war effort at a time when their own sons and brothers were fighting the enemy."

Right To Test Order
Cotton retorted that "you can't be engaging in legal forensics during the war the miners blindly followed Lewis in strikes which definitely injured the war effort at a time when their own sons and brothers were fighting the enemy."

Speaking of Lewis' action in defying the court's restraining order, Cotton said "the simple fact is that when a man issues a restraining order conceived to be a violation of a constitutional right, there is a traditional right to test that order."

When the program moderator asked Ball and Cotton if they saw any way to compromise the differences in order to end the strike, Ball said:

"I don't see how the government can compromise the enforcement of its own laws."

President Of Budd Company Dies At 75

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1 (AP)—Edward G. Budd, 75, founder and president of the Budd Company which developed the all-steel automobile body, died at his suburban Germantown home last night of acute dilation of the heart.

The Budd plants are located in Philadelphia and Detroit.

Born at Smyrna, Del., Budd began his trade as a machinist in 1887—first in his home town, then later with a Philadelphia machine tool building firm. In 1912 he founded the Edward G. Budd manufacturing company, which later the Budd Wheel Company.

The two firms merged last June.

Budd's companies are credited with inventing and developing the all-steel automobile body and the all-steel automobile wheel. They also claim to have developed the stainless steel airplane and the first stainless steel lightweight streamlined railroad train.

A tenth ship, the oiler Canisteo, already is at sea while a cargo ship, an ice breaker and the carrier Philippine Sea will sail within another month.

Kentucky CIO Assails Injunction Against UMW

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 1 (AP)—The Kentucky CIO leveled sharp criticism today at the government's injunction against the United Mine Workers, and at the same time urged the CIO-United States Steel Workers, charged John L. Lewis with "trying to break up the CIO."

ARSONIST—Harry Lowe (left), member of Chillicothe, Mo., police force, eyes Elopous Walker, 46, Kansas City negro laborer, during questioning of Walker about a series of fires in several small Missouri cities. Walker has been charged with arson, burglary and larceny. Col. Hugh Waggoner, of the State Highway Patrol, said Walker had made a statement admitting setting the fires.

Army And Navy Are Holding Key To Tax Outlook

Congress Must Decide If Defense Can Stand Over Two Billion Cut

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The new Congress must decide without delay whether the national defense can stand over a $2,000,000,000 trimming next fiscal year, officials said today, for the answer is the key to the biggest fiscal problems.

On the reductions made in Army and Navy spending depend the chances for tax reduction, budget balancing and debt retirement.

Army and Navy spending proposals are likely to get early attention not only because of their size and importance but also because the new Congressional Reorganization Act requires a committee report be submitted by February 15 on a budget which will set the spending ceiling for the whole government.

Occupation Costs Rise
The administration is expected to propose a $2,000,000,000 cutback from the total $13,500,000,000 allowed the services so far this year. Some influential Republican congressmen have expressed belief a deeper reduction could be made with safety.

However, this year's Army spending may be boosted to meet additional occupation costs. Secretary of War Patterson disclosed last night that Congress would be asked for an extra $379,000,000 for this purpose.

Patterson said the extra needs are due to an unforeseen increase of "persons fleeing oppression in Poland," together with higher food costs and a cut in Army budget requests.

Congress To Meet Jan. 3
Congress will meet January 3 and will receive the presidential budget proposals then, but will have nothing of its own to go on by February 15 unless its committees show unprecedented speed in probing agency requests for funds.

Since going thoroughly over all agencies' requests has always been a longer process for both Congress and the Budget Bureau, career fiscal men said, the most flexible items—namely military spending—probably will get detailed consideration first.

"Mystery" Planes
SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 30 (Delayed)—The Foreign Office asserted today that "planes of unknown nationality" have flown from Greece over Bulgarian territory seven times in the last five weeks.

Reached this week's agenda of the deputy Allied commandants.

Shafter, on leave as assistant superintendent of Los Angeles city schools, said the planes "ridiculed landings, businesses and manufacturers as a whole and was an objectionable infiltration of class warfare theories."

If the Americans stand pat on their veto, the book cannot be used in the city.

Just a year ago the shoe was on the other foot, with Soviet educators attacking as "militaristic" two children's readers reprinted by the Americans from original Weimar texts.

The Americans admitted at that time they had overlooked the possible effect of a few Christmas verses about a little boy's dream of tin soldiers and a toy cannon, which the Russians complained gave the wrong slant to German re-education.

Sen. McMahon Denies Saying U.S. Is Making Super Atomic Bomb

PARIS, Monday, Dec. 2 (AP)—Sen. Brian McMahon (D-Conn.) denied today a story carried in the British newspaper Reynolds News which said he told members of the British Parliament that the United States was making atomic bombs "600 times as powerful as those dropped on Japan."

McMahon was irate when told the publication said he had made the statement before a "hush hush" private meeting of members of Parliament of all parties.

Guffey Says GOP Widens Russian Gap

Sen. Ball Sees Left-Wing Democrats "Undermining" Byrnes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Sen. Guffey (D-Pa.) accused the Republican leadership today of widening the differences with Russia which he said Secretary of State Byrnes "is attempting to bridge."

Sen. Ball (R-Minn.) fired back that Republican co-operation with Byrnes will continue unless it is "undermined" by Democrats of Guffey's views.

Guffey, defeated in the November election, issued a farewell statement saying that "should the anti-Communist theme of the recent Republican campaign become crystallized into a definite isolationist policy of the party controlling Congress, it can exert a seriously adverse influence on world affairs."

Byrnes' Task Made Harder
"If we want a lasting peace we must neither play Britain off against Russia nor 'sang up' with Britain against Russia," he added.

Secretary of State Byrnes, in my opinion, has recognized that fact and has guided our diplomacy accordingly, but his task will become an impossible one if Republican leadership continues to widen the differences which he is attempting to bridge."

Ball told a reporter he considers Guffey a representative of a wing of the Democratic Party which has openly criticized Byrnes' policies.

Former Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace, whom Guffey has supported, voiced such criticisms in speeches before the election.

Ball Hits PAC Democrats
"The Wallace-Pepper-Guffey PAC Democrats have done more to undermine the Byrnes-Vandenberg-Connelly approach to bi-partisan foreign policy than any Republican," Ball declared.

It is quite understandable that Guffey should feel that the country is lost without the particular PAC brand of Democratic control which he was affiliated, but I think the American people will get along all right."

Canton, Pa., Fire Damage Estimated At $200,000

CANTON, Pa., Dec. 1 (AP)—Fanned by high winds, flames destroyed a lumber yard, several factories and stores and partially gutted Canton's largest hotel last night before firemen from nearby communities brought the $200,000 blaze under control.

Fire Chief Keltz, who made the damage estimate, said the fire threatened all 2,040 residents of this Northeastern Pennsylvania town.

Negro Janitor, 46, Admits Starting Fires In 10 Towns

Mystery Of Sudden Blazes In North Missouri Hamlets Solved

CHILlicothe, Mo., Dec. 1 (AP)—The midnight fear of small town dwellers in North Missouri was at an end today after capture of a burly 46-year-old negro janitor who admitted to police he set fires in 10 towns—including his boyhood home—because he "liked to watch 'em burn."

The mystery of sudden, sweeping fires which caused a quarter million dollars damage and terrorized neighboring hamlets was solved with a signed statement by Elopous Walker, ex-convict of Kansas City, State Highway Patrol officers said.

Started September 5
The first of Walker's admitted pillaging excursions was at tiny Corder, Mo., his boyhood home, on September 5. The others were in neighboring towns in the area.

Walker, who was a janitor at an apartment building in Kansas City and did odd jobs in the neighborhood, was charged with arson, burglary and larceny.

Setting the fires was "just something that comes in a man's mind and he don't know what he is doing," the negro told reporters following his confession to police after he was arrested on the highway near here yesterday morning.

Search for "a tall negro" had been under way since the sixth in the series of fires—at Higbee, Mo., when 14-year-old Perda Sue Cooper told police she saw a "tall negro with a heavy beard" ransacking her mother's purse while her mother was at the fire. During a number of the other fires, small items had been stolen.

Felt "Ashamed" Afterwards
Walker said it "made him feel ashamed" after he had set a fire and "I said to myself I'll never do this no more."

Highway Patrol Lt. James S. Poage said Walker told police he set the fires because he "liked to watch 'em burn." His arrest came 24 hours after the last fire, at Laredo, Mo.

Poage said the negro said he walked to a hill outside the town and watched while flames swept three buildings, a church and a house, and then he stole back into the village and burglarized a home.

Housewife Becoming Increasingly Discontented, Anthropologist Says

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—American women—homemakers and business women—are becoming increasingly discontented with their lot because they cannot make a free choice in the way their lives are spent, anthropologist Margaret Mead asserted today.

Writing in the current issue of "Fortune Magazine," Dr. Mead, herself a wife and mother, said that "more than a quarter of the women" are "artificially, definitely disturbed about their lot—as women," and traced the general causes to their isolation and loneliness in the home and their inability to choose their work after marriage.

The only workable solution, she suggests, is elimination of "the semi-voluntary slavery to house-keeping that we now impose on married women" by more labor-saving inventions, and by American men assuming more responsibility in the family home life.

Total Of Idle Soon May Hit Million Mark

Back-To-Work Move Fails To Follow Government Approval Of Fines

TRIAL MAY DRAG OUT MOST OF THIS WEEK

Collisison To Resume Stand; UMW Virginia Hearing Slated Today

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The legal battle of the United States vs. John L. Lewis may drag out for most of this week, attorneys indicated today, raising the prospect of large-scale industry shutdowns and 1,000,000 unemployed.

Fines authorized by the government against individual miners for each day of the soft coal strike brought not the slightest signs of a return to work. The fines, $1 to $2 a day, will go to the United Mine Workers' medical fund, under the government contract.

The government's sole hope of halting the walkout at present appeared to be the court ruling it seeks holding that Lewis' "termination" of his contract was unlawful. President Truman had no conferences on the situation today and other government offices were closed.

In the deadlock, Gov. William M. Tuck, of Virginia, urged the government to prosecute Lewis under the Smith-Connally act which outlaws strikes against government-owned plants or stand aside and let the individual states handle what he called "this challenge against law, order and public morality."

Virginia Case Pending
"Virginia, or any other state, has all the power it needs to repel insurrection," Tuck said on the radio, adding that states can administer labor laws better than the federal government.

The Virginia Corporation Commission has summoned Lewis to a hearing tomorrow on charges that the UMW violated state laws by "selling" memberships without commission sanction under the securities law but Lewis' contempt trial before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough will require his appearance here. Gordon B. Ambler, former mayor of Richmond, will represent Lewis there.

Justice Goldsborough's verdict on the contempt charge can scarcely be delivered before the end of this week, and a ruling on the legality of the contract termination notice may take even longer.

A government attorney disclosed that its case probably will not be completed before late Tuesday or Wednesday. Whether the defense then will present witnesses in its own behalf was uncertain, but in pending union lawyers said they probably would need two days for their arguments.

U.N. Subcommittee Will Study Veto Proposals

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Dec. 1 (AP)—Despite Britain's assertion that it was a move to "pass the baby," the 44-member United Nations Political and Security Committee tonight appointed a subcommittee to study all proposals affecting the use of the big power veto voting privilege in the Security Council.

This development came at the close of a three-hour session in which Great Britain submitted seven suggestions aimed at softening the use of the veto but declared that the big powers must presently retain their special voting privilege because they might be out-voted on some issue of vital interest to them.

In sending the controversial issue to the subcommittee, the United Nations once again sidetracked any immediate action on the veto problem.

"Women in our society complain of the lack of stimulation, of the loneliness, of the dullness of staying at home," she writes. "Little babies are poor conversationalists, husbands come home tired and sit reading the paper, and women who used to pride themselves on their ability to talk find on the rare evenings they can go out that their words clut on their tongues."

Men are taught they are free to "choose their jobs for one set of reasons, and their girls for another." "But while girls are taught they will choose their jobs in the same way as boys and choose their husbands as boys choose their wives, they can't choose their work after marriage."

And all girls, whether they love or hate cooking, like or dislike children, are expected "because they fall in love and want to be married, to want also to be homemakers and to enjoy the routine of bringing up children," she adds.

Advice To The Lovelorn

Women Of 40 Still Has Lot Of Time To Get Some Happiness Out Of Life

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Regardless of how the teen-ager may feel about it, a woman of 40 still has a lot of time ahead of her. Far too much, it seems to her, if all she can see in the years to come is hardship and sorrow.

But if you prefer to do that, rather than to break away from him completely, then I suggest that you try to regard him, for the time being anyhow, as someone you merely know casually, who has no real connection with your everyday life, and plan, as though there were only yourself and your children to consider, in the same manner a widow would do.

You say that your home isn't a happy place for your children. Don't you act as if that duty is to make it so? Children adjust quite easily to the absence of anyone leaving the family circle, and if you make a real effort to be cheerful yourself and not remind them in any way of their missing father, I'm certain they will adjust along very happily. Plan good times for them, see that they invite playmates to their home, and you yourself ask your own friends in for an afternoon or evening whenever you can.

If you act as though nothing were the matter—that is, that will be for awhile—and never allow yourself to brood, but instead fill your time with activities and thoughts and plans that leave your husband out just as definitely as though he were no longer living, you will find, in time, that you are very little to you any more, and that you get along without him very well indeed.

New Palestine Plan Reported; Violence Ebbs

Hebrew Paper Says Seven-Point Proposal Has Been Offered

JERUSALEM, Dec. 1 (AP)—A new seven-point plan reportedly suggested by bringing peace to the Holy Land was published today as police forces in the city were in a state of readiness for a possible attack on a police station and accompanying violence that injured two Jews and two British constables.

An official communique declared that the plan was believed to have been suggested by the British, and said that 16 road mines had been removed from highways leading into the city.

The usually reliable Socialist Hebrew paper Mishmar published the latest plan for Palestine, and said the Palestine government had offered it as a basis for future discussions among the Jews, Arabs and British. The seven points were:

Continuance of the present British mandate for 15 years with a new decision possible after that time; the Palestine government would be formed within the next 18 months; federalizing Palestine into purely Jewish, Arab and British sectors with the British sector including places of special interest to Christians.

Halting further Jewish settlement where Arabs were in the majority; 70 per cent of the population and making land purchase for Jewish colonization possible in other areas only under certain conditions; Jewish settlement in the Southern Palestine desert, namely Negeb, to be permitted; establishment of separate Jewish and Arab police forces jointly headed by the British supreme police command; establishment of a legislative council of 40 per cent Jews, 40 per cent Moslem Arabs and 20 per cent Christian Arabs and other Christians to assist the mandatory administration.

A Foreign Office spokesman in London said he had not heard of the plan. He considered it "very unlikely" that such a proposal, if it existed, had reached any official level.

Capt. N. H. Collinson, Federal Coal Mines Administrator, is to resume the stand tomorrow morning to permit Welly K. Hopkins, UMW chief counsel, to complete his cross-examination. Collinson was the first government witness. Civilian Production Administrator John D. Small and other officials whose affidavits formed the basis on which the government obtained a temporary restraining order against Lewis probably will follow.

Lewis' attorneys are laying the foundation for an appeal which they hope will serve to suspend, temporarily at least, any sentence that Lewis or the union may draw. Prospects for any strike settlement negotiations between Lewis and the private owners of the 3,300 bituminous mines now under federal seizure appeared as dim as ever.

Edward R. Burke, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, had proposed that the call a strike truce and talk contract terms with the operators. But 10 association directors repudiated his offer. The directors will meet here tomorrow on Burke's invitation to discuss the situation and determine their position.

With the walkout of the 400,000 bituminous miners headed for its third week, new predictions of factory shutdowns threatened an unemployment total topping 1,000,000. The magazine Steel estimated steel production last week would be below the 43 per cent level of last spring's coal strike.

Additional schools also planned to close for lack of heat.

The halting of coal shipments and a decline of other freight traffic because of the strike, however, pushed railroads in better position regarding locomotive fuel than they were when the walkout started, according to W. C. Kendall, head of the car service division of the Association of American Railroads.

Because of this, Kendall told a reporter, no freight trains may be necessary even if the strike continues. An embargo order has been drafted but Kendall said that "we are not at all convinced it is necessary."

Double moves were in progress to utilize the time. Inch and Little Inch oil pipelines to carry natural gas into eastern industrial areas as a temporary fuel augmenting measure. The Interior Department continued conferences with four separate applicants. The House Surplus Property Committee subcommittee on the Interior, led by Krus as a witness tomorrow in its inquiry into the situation.

A few minutes later Rouge was between the lines when persons on the fifth floor of the Chungking bank building began shooting into the police station.

At this juncture the police arrested him, saying they had decided there should be no more pictures.

consumption he did not name the Communists, possibly fearing that this would aggravate a situation which already was the ugliest since Japanese occupation.

The Mayor said, however, that representatives of the sidewalk merchants visited him at his home today and gave him a written declaration that they were not responsible for the rioting. This was an indirect way of accusing the Communists.

theatre provided a perfect setting for the tableau. Behind the robed figures of the Elks Glee Club, and the rows of officers and guests in their formal attire, the Memorial Tableau was staged.

With Beverly Beckman reciting a monologue composed by Jean Dixon Knight, the four cardinal principles of the order were pictured. Jean Dixon Knight and Ruth Lee Moser portrayed Charity. Louise Moore portrayed Justice. Roy Whiteman and William Raupach with hands clasped in prayer portrayed Brotherly Love and Whiteman portrayed Fidelity.

After James E. Yarnall, secretary called the names of the seven departed brothers, 200 members of the order, seated in the audience, stood, and marched in single file to the stage, across the front, pausing at the center to place a small floral tribute at the mounted head of an Elk, symbolic of the order.

Michael P. O'Neill, Jr., exalted ruler presided at the Memorial service. Other officers who participated in the service were Robert E. Walker, esteemed loyal knight; Walter S. It would be hard for Mrs. Brown to hide the fact that she is French . . . why many of the men who served with the Army in France, recognize the fact as soon as they see her behind the counter. "Even before I speak," they say "you're French, aren't you?" she declared.

But Christmas is a busy time, in Cumberland, in Paris, everywhere, and Mrs. Brown is busy trying to please the rushing public, she declared, as she resumed her professional pose behind the counter, and asked "May I help you, please?"

Announcement was made over the weekend that "Gallant Bess" said to be the "most intelligent horse in the world" will visit Cumberland, Saturday, Dec. 7, in one stop of a tour of 110 cities as a walking preview of her forthcoming motion picture, "Gallant Bess."

Driver Appeals Verdict In Recklessness Charge

Wilbur E. Fogle, 18, of 216 Piedmont avenue, filed notice of appeal after being found guilty of reckless driving in Trial Magistrates' Court Saturday. He was fined $25, but posted $100 bond when appeal was filed.

State Trooper Harry Holsinger arrested Fogle after his car collided head-on with the automobile of Harvey Devore, 53, of Ellerslie, in front of Lover's Leap Service Station in the Narrows early last Sunday morning. Both drivers and Joseph Reissig, 18, of 815 Shawnee avenue, riding with Fogle, were hurt.

Trooper Holsinger said he found Fogle, who forfeited $11.45 bond in Cresaptown on a speeding charge the night before the accident, lying along the road in an unconscious condition when he arrived at the scene. He accused the defendant of driving at an excessive speed and being over the center of the highway.

Police said Davis was headed North on North Centre street and Reall was traveling east on Baltimore street when the collision occurred. Davis' car ran between two parking meters, jumped the sidewalk in front of McCrory's store and stopped. No one was hurt.

Changes Announced In Local Law Firms

With Col. George Henderson succeeding Walter C. Capper as associate judge of circuit court here, Capper is renewing his partnership in the law firm of Capper and Jenkins with William S. Jenkins, 19 Greene street, and W. Earle Cobey has joined the firm of Carscaden and Gilchrist, succeeding Henderson who was senior member.

Capper was appointed chief judge by Governor O'Connor after D. Lindley Sloan reached the age limit and retired in April, 1944. In January, 1945, after the state court system was revised and circuit chief judges no longer served in the Court of Appeals, he was appointed associate judge by the governor.

Since he was named to the bench, only five appeals were taken from rulings handed down by Capper and Chief Judge William A. Huster, and they were sustained in four of them by the high court.

Since his return from the Navy, in which he served as an officer in the Pacific theatre, Cobey has maintained law offices in the Liberty Trust Building. He is to be associated with William R. Carscaden and C. William Gilchrist.

Cobey recently returned from Sarasota, where he recovered from a siege of pneumonia, contracted after his campaign as candidate for the Democratic nomination for attorney-general on the Tawes ticket.

THE STRANGE CASE OF

The Brewers Dilemma

or, how can an employer, who is 100% Union, with no Union disputes of any kind, have labor trouble?

The "local" breweries have a contract which holds good until April 1st, 1947—covering every man employed—with The Brewery Workers Union, affiliated with the C.I.O.

Under the Wagner Act the brewers must respect this contract—yet the A. F. of L. Teamsters Union insists we break the law, violate our contract and deal with their Union.

There is no sense, no logic, no basis in fact for this contest between these rival factions, for by so doing the A. F. of L. Teamsters not only attempt by force to compel the brewers to commit an illegal, unjustifiable act—but through un-American coercion, by threat of violence, picketing and secondary boycotting, they seek to force retailers and distributors to cease handling products which they know are 100% Union-made.

Remember, the brewers have no quarrel with either Union—the brewers have no part in any controversy—yet the products of the three brewing companies in Pittsburgh are falsely labeled "Unfair."

For the information of the public, the beer distributors, hotel keepers, taverns and clubs, all out-of-state and in-state beer sold in Western Pennsylvania is produced by The United Brewery Workers, affiliated with the C. I. O. This includes the following local brands:

How Deep A Cut Can Be Made In Federal Taxes

The federal finance committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce has issued a report calling for a 25 per cent cut in present corporate income taxes next year and a 5 per cent cut in present corporate income rates. Nor would the committee stop there, although these recommendations go further than proposals made by Republican leaders in Congress.

In addition, the report would lighten the tax burden by immediate repeal of wartime increases in excise taxes, repeal of transportation and other "nuisance" taxes, lowering of estate and gift tax schedules, halving the present 25 per cent rate on capital gains, and reducing double taxation on earnings of corporations and dividends to stockholders. It suggests that eventually gift and estate taxes be abandoned by the federal government and that double taxation be eliminated.

A companion report, issued earlier, recommended that the federal budget for the fiscal year 1948 be balanced at approximately $25,000,000,000. With expenditures now at the astronomical total of $42,000,000,000 a year, a slash of 40 per cent would be necessary to hit this target. Certainly $25,000,000,000 a year—one-sixth of the total income of the American people—should be sufficient to operate the federal government.

The report points to nonrecurring expenditures of approximately $10,000,000,000 in the 1947 budget. Thus it will be necessary to trim only $7,000,000,000 of waste from federal expenditures to attain the $25,000,000,000 goal. This should not be difficult.

With wheat at $2 a bushel, those green fields in the Southwest have taken on a new luster.

New Deal And Britain's Labor Government

It is perhaps dangerous to try to draw a parallel between British and American politics but in some respects there is at least a surface similarity between the Labor Government's position and that of the New Deal in its early days. Both attempted what amounted to a peaceful revolution. For a number of years, despite its radical experimentation, the Roosevelt Administration held and strengthened its grip upon the electorate. It was a full 14 years before the revolution against radicalism, extravagance, and administrative incompetence reached sufficient force to cost the Democrats control of both houses of Congress.

There has been nothing corresponding to a general election in Britain since the Labor Government took office in July 1945. But the results of certain isolated by-elections seem to indicate that it, like the New Deal, will be solidly entrenched in power for a considerable length of time. There is bitter criticism of any resentment against the government but it has not, as yet, affected Labor's strength among the electorate as a whole.

This is, for instance, the first British government since Disraeli's Conservative administration of 1874 to succeed in holding every seat in Parliament contested at a by-election during its first year in power.

It would be foolish to press the parallel too far. The New Deal's stay in power was unquestionably prolonged by the war. The winds of political fortune are subject to many hazards and sudden shifts. But it does seem likely that Britain's Conservatives, like this country's Republicans in the 1930s, will have to reconcile themselves to a fairly long period out of office.

Note In A Bottle

The old question of whether or not Adolf Hitler survived the last days in Berlin has been revived by the discovery of all things—a note in a bottle washed up on the Danish coast. The writer of the note, whoever he may be, claims that Hitler escaped from the chancellery, fled to Finland, took a submarine to Spain, and was lost at sea when the U-boat struck a wreck and sank off Gedser lighthouse.

It is possible, of course, that this tale is true. After all, it is hardly possible to think of any account less authoritative and more likely to be false than one washed up in a bottle.

There is no simpler and cheaper way, in fact, to start a legend than to write a note, stick it into a bottle, and set it adrift. People who would not give a second glance to a scrap of paper in the street would give the same scrap their fascinated attention if it turned up on a beach in a bottle. There is something mysterious about messages sent this way which captures the imagination no matter how trivial they may be and whether they are true or false.

The present note is not worth a moment's serious consideration unless it is supported by more evidence than appears in the account reporting its discovery. It is only the first of a long line which will be turning up for years as long as there is the faintest doubt about Hitler's fate and the faintest chance of imposing on the credulity of the German people.

Rent Control

When the OPA's House Advisory Rent Committee recommended a 15 per cent "across the board" increase in residential rents and complete removal of all rent controls from new construction, it sounded the death knell of all rent ceilings. It had taken for granted that the fantastic system of priorities required to build a house would be scrapped by the new Congress, unless Truman jumps the gun.

From the very beginning of price control, the freezing of residential rents has been the rock bottom of OPA policy. While naturally opposed by landlords, federal control of rents has generally been recognized as the keystone of the program to hold living costs down while boosting incomes. It has contributed in no small part to the present housing shortage.

There was an economic injustice to landlords in rent control in view of the dollar. In hundreds of thousands of instances tenants were forced to buy dwellings at inflated prices because the owner of the property in which they were living decided to sell rather than continue to rent at the figure set by the OPA.

The housing shortage is the most pressing of national shortages, having reached the stage of a near-emergency. Undoubtedly, rent control has slowed apartment house construction. Private housing construction and investment definitely need to be encouraged.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

COMPLICATIONS IN CATARACT OPERATIONS

Life is a gamble and man, from time immemorial, has lived in a world surrounded by dangers. In the past we were confronted with wild beasts and hostile neighbors; now, by mechanization and speed. The well adjusted individual rarely gives such speculations a thought and realizes that carefulness and caution will minimize accidents.

Because of the nature of his work the physician is always aware of breakers ahead. His most hazardous task is surgery, which he feels is justified whenever the results are worth the risk. Sometimes this course is lifesaving as in toxic goiter, infected appendix, or cancer. Others repair diseased parts. Should relief fail, criticism is the order of the day.

A good example is cataract, in which the lens in an eye loses its transparency thru the aging process. Vision falls gradually and glasses are of no help. The only hope of restoring sight lies in an ingenious operation in which the cloudy lens is extracted. When successful the sufferer praises the surgeon to the sky; but in the small number of failures (3 per cent) the disappointed individual often resorts to scorn.

Is this the physician's fault, the patient's, or is it a matter of fate? The question is answered if the details of the operation are known and the pitfalls appreciated. Complications can be traced to hard luck only when the surgeon is skilled and the patient in perfect condition.

If the incision does not hold, the procedure will probably be in vain because the fluid in the eyeball may leak out. This possibility is not as great as it was in the past because better suture material is available and smaller incisions are made. On the other hand, if the sufferer does not cooperate during the first few days when healing is taking place much of the operator's good work may be nullified. Turning the head, coughing, straining, or holding the breath are all contraindicated. To discourage activities of this type, sedatives are administered and an enema is given the night before. In addition, the operation is postponed if the subject has a cold, sinusitis, or pneumonia.

Another complication is a peculiar infection in the eyeball called "iridocyclitis," which is prone to arise nine to 13 days after the maneuver. Although bacterial invasion may be responsible, it is usually considered an allergic reaction, perhaps to bits of lens tissue which cannot be removed. No one can be blamed and, when treated early, improvement often ensues.

Hemorrhage and glaucoma sometimes enter the picture. The person with high blood pressure, heart failure, or diabetes is more susceptible. In these circumstances the victim is asked to enter the hospital several days in advance of surgery, during which time tension can be reduced and other disturbances brought under control. But in spite of precautions, the disorders cannot always be rectified.

These are some of the factors that should be considered. The operation would not be recommended, however, if they occurred too frequently. But in 97 per cent adequate vision can be restored.

TONSILS AND GOITER

F. J. writes: Can chronically diseased tonsils cause goiter?

REPLY: No. Infected tonsils can be blamed for many disorders but goiter is usually related to iodine metabolism.

MOTHER'S DARLING

C. W. J. writes: Our 3 year old has never ruled the furniture, she never scuffs her shoes, or bops people over the head. Is she normal?

REPLY: These are not necessarily criteria of normality. I believe you have one in a thousand and all the reason in the world to brag.

P. S. One of mine was like that too.

ACIDITY OF URINE

C. B. writes: What is meant by a 10.6 acid test of the urine?

REPLY: An alkaline reaction. In testing the pH, the neutral point is 7. If the reading is above 7, alkalinity is increased; below 7, acidity.

MILK AND BLOOD

A. L. writes: Will too much milk make the blood turn blue?

REPLY: There are no foods or drinks that make the blood turn this shade—not even blueberries.

ILL-ADVISED MESSAGE

J. Z. writes: You do not advise massage for varicose veins. In what way might the practice prove harmful?

REPLY: Because it will not eliminate the varicose condition and enough damage may be done to the veins to encourage inflammation and the formation of a blood clot.

NEWsgrams

With toy electric trains that puff smoke and make choo-choo sounds as well as whistle, the living room comes Christmas Day probably will be a reasonably facsimile of a signalman's shanty.

Our hope now is that Winter will not be as reluctant to go as it was to arrive.

Ninety-five French sheep fell asleep on a railroad track. A freight train came along and solved the neighborhood's meat shortage problem.

Times and styles may change but the Christmas necktie goes on forever, remaining its old undesirable self.

Christmas Buying As Seen Through Economist's Eyes

By ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass., Dec. 1.—I have just returned from Boston where I attempted to do some Christmas Shopping. To tell the truth, I did not buy anything, but spent the entire day comparing the quality of the prices of the various goods offered. As a result, I am now giving readers some good, sound advice.

My home is about fifteen miles from Boston. Not only are there many suburban towns around Boston, but I motor about considerably and visit various small cities in New England. I find that one gets as good values and as low prices by making purchases in Northern small cities and towns in the big cities. Of course, this may not be true in all states but I am sure it applies to Massachusetts. Take Gloucester, for instance, a city of 25,000, where by summer home is. Down there the other day I found better Christmas goods for less money than could be secured in Boston.

Therefore, my first suggestion is that you purchase your Christmas goods where you live. You often get better values by buying from home people whom you know. Moreover, you have the privilege of making returns and of getting replacements in the case of breakage which you may not get when dealing with green clerks with whom you are not personally acquainted.

Quality And Prices

Many big city stores are putting out a tremendous amount of junk this year. Department managers have been told that anything over a year old must be marked down to $1 in the stocktaking which will occur after Christmas. Hence, these managers are striving to get rid of the old stock and especially the adulterated and ersatz goods made during the war. Your friends will never thank you for any of this shoddy material, inside upon quality or else give your friends a check or certificate which they can use next year for better goods.

Now, as to prices: I venture the forecast that Christmas prices will be the highest this year of any Christmas for many years to come. There have been price ceilings during the past few years on most of the goods in the stores. Now, these price ceilings have been taken off within the past three weeks. Many merchants have jumped at the opportunity to mark up goods for the Christmas trade. They realize that it is their one chance; yes, their last chance; to cash in at high prices. Therefore, I predict that after Christmas this country will see the greatest mark-downs in history.

Why Not Give Money?

In view of the above, it seems as if cash is perhaps the best present one can give those whom we truly consider our friends. Hence, the purchase of an attractive Christmas card with a check or dollar bill enclosed should be the most welcomed by a wise recipient. This will enable your friend to select what he or she wishes after the turn of the year at mark-down sales or else wait until the new, good-quality goods come on the market.

Now, a word to parents who have reached the age of the writer. The only two things of which we are absolutely sure are: (1) We are going to die before many years and (2) there will be a "death tax" on our estate running from 15-50 per cent according to how much money we leave to our wife, children or others. Yet, we can give $3,000 to each of these persons this Christmas and every following Christmas and every following Christmas we can give a penny of tax. I know it is difficult for us who have worked hard and been thrifty to give away $3,000 a year to each of our children—yes, awful hard! But if we have any sense we will do it even if we keep the money

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Lewis Pressured For Government Settlement Through Top Management In Coal-Using Industries; Steel And Wall Street Split Wide Open On Deal

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Here is a blow-by-blow picture of how John L. Lewis has been frantically working behind the scenes to effect a settlement of the coal strike.

Both government and industry are split wide open on how to handle Lewis. John L., being a union dictator, has been able to play divide-and-conquer all over the lot. His steady war of nerves against both the administration and the operators is now beginning to bear fruit.

Immediately after it became certain the strike was coming on, John L. called Cyrus Eaton, Cleveland banker, and asked him to come to Washington to help end the strike. Lewis next contacted Harry Moses, head of the Henry C. Frick Coal Company and boss of U. S. Steel's coal operators. Moses drove all night from Pittsburgh in order to be on deck in Washington next day for a four-hour session with Lewis.

Lewis complained to Eaton at their first secret meeting that he was unable to contact anybody inside the government to negotiate a deal, so Eaton became his liaison man. Eaton, whose Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad has a vital interest in coal and who has successfully influenced power politics, immediately got busy. Lewis told Eaton he was willing to make a deal, but that he wanted to force the government to postpone its legal injunction and contempt proceedings against him.

Lewis also held two secret meetings with U. S. Steel's Moses, who operates more captive coal mines than anyone else in the world. At the first, he proposed that the captive mines sign an agreement with the U.M.W. which would keep the steel mills going. This would also have kept 50,000 miners on the job and would have provided an open wedge for further negotiations with the entire coal industry.

U. S. Steel says No

Moses took this up with top U. S. Steel officials in New York and, two days later, again met with Lewis secretly. The answer was that both U. S. Steel and Wall Street were split wide open on any possible deal. Benjamin Fairless, the corporation's president, was in favor of the Lewis proposal, but Irving Olds, chairman of U. S. Steel, opposed any separate deal with the miners.

Meanwhile, Lewis kept contacting big operators. Some of his contacts were through his U.M.W. subordinates: Tom Kennedy, Percy Tetlow, and John T. Jones.

Simultaneously, Cyrus Eaton, working from Suite 516 of the Carlton hotel here (Cordell Hull's old apartment), talked to Reconstruction Director John Steelman via the White House private phone line to Florida. Eaton also called White House court jester George Allen, a director of Republic Steel, who was in New York. He made the same proposition to each of them—namely, that Lewis would settle with the operators if the government would quash its legal proceedings.

Steelman and Allen consulted privately by phone, then called Eaton back, told him they thought they looked up so that the kids can't spend it until after our funeral!

One more suggestion. I have a grandson who is away to school. When I asked him what he wanted for Christmas, he said, "Grandpa I would like a subscription to our home newspaper." This seemed very sensible on the part of the boy and certainly it is an easy way for me to select a Christmas present for him. I wonder if every reader of this column hasn't some children, relatives or friends who would appreciate a subscription to Truman, provided Lewis signed a contract guaranteeing uninterrupted coal production until the spring of 1948. Truman wanted a guarantee of 18 uninterrupted months of coal production, but Lewis flatly turned thumbs down on the proposal. He boomed the answer over the telephone. However, Eaton made Lewis agree that this was a wedge in the government's thinking and the basis for negotiation.

U. S. Willing To Postpone

Meanwhile, the government even gave Lewis an unnoticed tip-off that it might be willing to compromise the court proceedings when Lewis showed up before Judge Goldsborough last Monday. Assistant Attorney General John S. Coffey, handling the government's case, told the court the government would not object to a postponement of the legal cases against Lewis if the miners went back to work. This was Lewis's cue to go back into frantic, private negotiations with the operators to swing a new contract.

This finagling was done largely behind the back of Secretary of the Interior Krug, the man who is supposed to be in charge of coal for the government. This highlights the secret backing and filling of government officials regarding Lewis ever since the coal strike even threatened. At one time Attorney General Tom Clark refused to present Lewis at Krug's request and for some days a bitter argument raged between the Justice and Interior departments over legal proceedings.

On one occasion, a three-hour argument raged back and forth between the attorney general and Warner Gardner, assistant secretary of the interior, over legal strategy, with all kinds of names turning the atmosphere of Clark's office blue.

Interior department officials privately charge Attorney General Clark with being too much impressed with the legal ability of Lewis's chief lawyer, Welly K. Hopkins, who went to school with Clark in Texas and who once was associated with Clark in the Justice Department. They also say Hopkins for a time had hypnotized Clark and that was why the attorney general was loath to prosecute.

However, President Truman has been strongly behind Secretary Krug and believes that there must be a showdown with John L. Lewis. At one cabinet conference, both Reconstruction Director Steelman and the attorney general took a position against Krug, but Truman emphatically supported the latter.

Krug has also had some fiery sessions with Lewis personally, which haven't leaked out to the press.

His last session was shortly before the strike, at which the Secretary of the Interior tried to persuade the beetle-browed boss of the miners to agree to a 60-day strike truce, while the miners negotiated direct with the operators. Lewis, however, refused. Blowing his top in a rage, he charged Krug with holding secret meetings with the operators without his knowledge.

Today, of course, Lewis is doing just exactly what he then refused to do—namely, holding frantic, backstage talks with the operators whom he previously spurned. This earlier conference, however, Krug handed Lewis a written memorandum for a proposed strike truce, whereupon the miners' boss angrily stalked out of the meeting.

Krug had earlier persuaded Charles O'Neill, head of the Northern Coal Operators, to agree to negotiate direct with Lewis, upon which the government would turn back the mines to private operation.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP) — The outcome of the contest for majority leader in the House is uncertain, despite assertions by supporters of Rep. Charles A. Halleck (R) of Indiana that they are sure of enough votes to win. Two things have happened to jolt Halleck's bid for the post:

1. The large Pennsylvania delegation which Halleck counted as in the bag, held a meeting and decided on a watch and wait policy.

2. Rep. Everett M. Dirksen (R) of Illinois entered the race, a move that some GOP leaders say will divert more votes from Halleck than from Rep. Clarence Brown (R) of Ohio, generally regarded as Halleck's chief contest.

Brown's bid, admittedly, injured by the candidacy of Rep. Thomas A. Jenkins (R) of Ohio who is said to feel that he outranks Brown because he is chairman of the Ohio GOP delegation.

There is a distinct possibility that a dark horse still will win the coveted post.

Bourbon whiskey production will increase sharply next year, but it will be about three or four years before you will be able to find substantial amounts of it in retail stores.

Reason for the increase—the record-breaking 1946 corn crop. Distillers will get twice as much corn in 1947 as they did this year.

But spokesmen for the distilling industry warn that the whiskey supply is going to continue short despite increased production because it takes four years to age "bottled in bond" bourbon.

Cheerful note for tipplers. Blend brands will be more plentiful next year.

Senate republicans who have just avoided a threatened fight over filling leadership posts in the upper chamber, now face an undercover tug-o-war over the chairmanship of the labor committee. Senator George D. Aiken (R) of Vermont was expected to get the post. However, he opposed the Case anti-strike bill backed by members of his party during the last session of Congress. The bill is certain to be reintroduced in January and sponsors of the measure do not want opposition from the driver's seat.

That is the real reason behind the announcement by Senator Robert A. Taft (R) Ohio that he may seek to be chairman of the labor committee rather than the finance committee.

Taft fought for the Case bill in the last Congress, and Republican senators generally interpret the elections as a mandate from the people to control strikes. So a number of Republicans are urging Taft to assert his seniority and take the labor committee chairmanship to insure sympathetic handling of labor reform legislation.

With the new 80th Congress expected to display much interest in the tariff—a traditional subject of Republican concern—the nation's capital is watchfully waiting to determine the congressional attitude on world trade prospects.

The official attitude of the government has been set forth plainly by Undersecretary of Commerce Alford Schindler.

He declared in a recent speech that his department "will work with unyielding strength and energy to bring about a lowering of world trade barriers." In this connection, he remarked:

"Who will deny that unwarranted and selfishly inspired high tariffs are not artificial mechanisms designed primarily to sustain a one-way traffic in foreign trade? It would be a game played by many nations; but a game at which no one wins. The net result of this competitive race has been a plague on international relations."

PITCHING HORSESHOES by Billy Rose

I wuz robbed. According to the Bureau of Vital Statistics, I am 47 years of age. That's plain silly. Somewhere along the line somebody picked 20 years off my pocket.

Somebody gave me a fast count. It was only a couple of years ago I was saving the colored pictures they gave away with Sweet Caporal's cigarettes.

It was only last year I got my first pair of longies, my first shave, my first kiss.

Only a few months ago I sat on a hard bench in a vacant lot up in the Bronx and saw a flickering movie of Mary Pickford in pigstails. It was only last summer I sat in the bleachers and watched Christy Mathewson pitch for the Giants. But my birth certificate says 1899—it must be a typographical error.

I don't claim to be Mickey Rooney but on the other hand I wasn't around when Big Dipper was a drinking cup. I refuse to believe I'm through cooking and ready to be basted.

I don't quarrel with my shaving mirror when it tells me my school-boy complexion has graduated. I don't pretend the Duke around my middle is a life-belt. But outside of a slight knock in the left kneecap I think I'm in good working order. There are a few wrinkles, but they're laugh wrinkles.

On the tennis court, if my wife hits the ball where I ain't, instead of letting it over and knowing the cover off it, I holler, "Good shot!" That doesn't mean my heart is getting tired—it's just getting tender.

After a couple of sets last summer I told Eleanor I felt like a two-year-old.

Are you talking about a horse or an egg? she asked.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

WELCOME TO THE WINDSORS The American people are acting as hosts to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who have just arrived from England, and the rumor has it that they're looking for a California ranch. . . I guess the Duke wants something solid they can't steal.

They're coming to California for some of that wonderful sunshine and I can't blame them. . . I'm sure they'll just love California and our traffic won't bother them at all. . . they drive on the wrong side of the street also.

Yesir, the Duke will feel right at home here. Every morning he'll wake at the crack of dawn and fill his lungs with that wonderful smog. It's great to have him, though. The Duke is a great style setter and personally started the Windsor knot fad. He wanted to show me how to tie the knot correctly but he couldn't find a tree high enough.

For a time the Duke was dickerin' for my ranch, but it seems he was lasing it over land by regular chickens. Everyone knows about the Duchesse's jewels being stolen. . . In fact, while they were looking at property here a gopher came up and yelled, "Go ahead and frisk me."

The Duke is looking for something very special in property. He wants hot and cold running tea in the house and a swimming pool equipped with a lighthouse.

His lot is so big he has to send delegates to the U. N. to represent him. He had a terrible experience in the Bahamas though. . . He went out to stake his claim by regular law, but the Bahamians were stranded without food or water. They say the sun never sets on the Duke's property. Just as soon as he finds the right place he plans to throw a small house-warming party at the Hollywood Bowl. . .

But then Eleanor is a great one for joshing.

In my set, 30 is a nice age for a woman, especially if she happens to be forty. I'm getting to envy the little deep-lipped practiced by the gals. Why can't I have ten years more of life between 29 and 30? I know ingenious in the theatre who got bow-legged backing out of covered wagons. I have as much right to be 27 as they have. One of the things that stops me is the fear of being asked whether I wrote "That Old Gang of Mine" when I was 3.

Suppose I do puff a little when I run after a bus? It doesn't mean my gut-and-go has got up and went. Any mechanic will tell you buses go faster these days. Suppose I order a cup of tea instead of a coke? Can't a fellow's tastes get a little more civilized? Suppose I do cry at the movies these days? That doesn't prove I'm getting old—it only means Bette Davis is getting to be a better actress. All right, so I do put on rubbers when it rains. It's not that I worry about getting my feet wet. It's just that shoes are scarce and expensive now.

I threw a cemetery salesman out of my office the other day. He asked if I'd like to be buried in a family plot. I told him there had been a plot in our family for years and that was to get my kid sister married.

On the level, do I look 47 to you? Don't spare my feelings. I want you to be completely frank. Thanks, pal. I didn't know. And here's that sawbuck I owe you.

But what, what ever happened to Sessue Hayakawa?

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Bells have always fascinated me. For as I have collected them, I have also books that told about them. Poets have written of bells. Poe's poem is an example of a famous one. At my summer camp is a U. S. Navy bell that calls me to dine, and I have an old cow bell I often ring around my head.

That I have often stopped to listen to, when driving in the country. I have a bell that once hung in a ship, that I bought in Nova Scotia, also one that once hung from the neck of an oxen team. There is a distinctive fainter preacher and one with a personality of its own. The late George Grey Barnard, the sculptor, once presented me with a beautiful bell from a convent in France. And I have bells from dinner tables, school bells, sleigh bells, the bell of a young man's dormitory, and I have a bell that a Premier of Nova Scotia once used to call him to his meals! All interesting and full of romantic lore.

As a boy I used to ring the bell for a call to worship, in the church where my father preached, and in which I was the janitor! I love the carillon bells that peal out their beautiful tones from a church tower. It is an event to listen to them from the beautiful Riverside Church in New York City, at Valley Forge, and at the Bok tower in Wales, Florida. I am always inspired at an Easter service at the latter.

Sir Richard Burton has written beautifully about the ring of the "K

Frostburg Couple Are United In Marriage At Nuptial Mass Saturday

By RUDOLPH NICKEL
FROSTBURG, Dec. 1.—Miss Eleanor Norris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Norris, became the bride of Harry Dishong, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dishong, all of this city, Saturday, November 30, at a nuptial mass in St. Michael's Catholic Church. The single ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Regis Larkin, assistant pastor, before the church altar which was adorned with white snapdragons and ferns.

The attendants were Mrs. Margaret Lancaster and Bernard Dishong, sister and brother of the groom. The ushers were Davis and Lionel Norris, brothers of the bride.

Nuptial music was played by Mrs. Richard Goldsworthy, organist. During the mass, Mrs. Giles Maury sang "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother," "O Lord, I Am Not Worthy," and Schubert's "Ave Marie." The accompaniments were played by Mrs. Goldsworthy.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a floor-length gown of blue velvet, made on princess lines, with a full skirt and a sweetheart neckline. The long sleeves ended in points over the wrists and tiny buttons trimmed the scalloped bodice. She wore a small hat of the same material, trimmed with feathers, and a shoulder-length veil. Her only ornament was a triple strand of pearls. The bride carried a shawl bouquet of white chrysanthemums from which fell a shower of white satin ribbons knotted with stephanotis.

The groom wore a tuxedo with a white waistcoat and a white shirt with a white bow tie. He carried a shawl bouquet of white chrysanthemums from which fell a shower of white satin ribbons knotted with stephanotis.

The bride's mother chose royal blue velvet with white accessories. A corsage of gardenias completed her costume. The bridegroom's mother wore black trimmed with pink and black accessories. Her corsage was pink roses.

A reception for relatives and friends was held at the bride's home, following the ceremony. The home was decorated with fall flowers, and a three tiered wedding cake was the centerpiece of the table.

Mrs. Dishong, graduate of Beall High School, is employed on the staff of the Celanese Corporation. Her husband is in the trucking business with his father.

For traveling, the bride wore a pale blue gabardine suit with black accessories and a corsage of white baby mums. After a trip through the south, the couple will reside at their newly built home on Ormond street.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Thomas L. Wright, Dr. Owen L. Wright, Mrs. Donalda Wright, Mrs. Charles McMaisters and Miss Dorothy Wright, all of

Vets Observe Anniversary
Braddock Chapter, No. 9, Disabled American Veterans observed the fifth anniversary of the Jap attack on Pearl Harbor Sunday by inaugurating a membership drive. The first Sunday in December is known among the members as "Disabled American Veterans' Day" and on this account the local chapter decided to start the campaign on the anniversary of the event, in which so many veterans were disabled.

According to Richard Goldsworthy, commander, Braddock Chapter, No. 9 is the largest chapter in Allegany county and every possible effort is being made to have all disabled veterans in the Frostburg area unite with the local chapter. William Shuck, secretary of the group, reports that the chapter rooms in the Stern building are being used to a greater extent now than at any time since the organization was established here.

Failure To Stop Clock Irks Navy

Coach Says Another Play Might Have Produced Winning Score

BY SID FEDER
NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—The calamity of the clock, a "whodunit" that some of the boys believe may have stopped Navy from chalking up the greatest gridiron upset in the book, was still giving steam today, while the excited crystal spheres looked ahead to next year, and what might happen to Army.

This little number apparently is to be entitled "we're gonna get even," because from all you hear in the guessing games all over the place, the careering Cadets from West Point, who scored their next season to both the Irish of Notre Dame and the Middles of Navy, who put up the fight of their lives yesterday before losing out 21-18 to Army in Philadelphia.

When the end came in that thriller before 102,000 customers, the Middles were on the Army five and still trying, but the clock ran out on them. And Coach Tom Hamilton, who believed his comeback kids could do it all the time, claimed the referee should have stopped the clock when a substitute came in with less than 15 seconds to go, and given the Middles one more shot at it.

Concerning Army's future, it isn't that the viewers-with-alarm suggest that the Cadets shouldn't show up next year, but that they should be kept in with less than 15 seconds to go, and given the Middles one more shot at it.

Meantime, Navy loses only two of its come-out-fighting starting set of yesterday, who lost by only three extra points after matching the Cadets touchdown-for-a-touchdown. And out at South Bend, it is no secret that the Irish are looking for a three-deep in gridiron who are practically breathing brimstone and fire for revenge for the lopsided larrupings Army handed them in '44 and '45.

Pass Interception Nets Gaels 6 To 0 Triumph
SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1 (AP)—St. Mary's right halfback, Paul Crowe, intercepted a pass and raced 96 yards in the second period today to give the Gaels a 6 to 0 victory over the University of San Francisco in their annual football game played before a crowd estimated at 50,000 fans.

The field was wet and soft from recent rains and slippery footing cut down the running attack of the eleven.

The Gaels, game time favorites, clearly outplayed their rivals, however, and in the third period advanced 63 yards plus to finally lose the ball on downs on San Francisco's 1-foot line. Score by periods: ST. MARY'S..... 0 0 6 6

OLYMPICS FOR ENGLAND

Baltimore Bullets Edge Amvets In 47-42 Battle

Pro League Champs Win Thriller In Closing Minutes; Bloom, Pence Lead Point Getters

In a hammer and tongs battle that was not decided until the closing minutes of play, the Baltimore Bullets, 1945-1946 champions and current pace setters of the American Professional Basketball League, emerged victorious over the Cumberland Amvets by the score of 47 to 42 last night before a gathering of 720 cash customers at S.S. Peter and Paul gymnasium.

Coach John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh's ballhawks gave their best performance of the season but it was not enough to head off the Coach Harry "Bud" Jannette's outfit, which sewed up the game in the last minute and 30 seconds on a pair of fielders by Bill McKeever.

Late in the third period the Bullets enjoyed a ten-point advantage at 39-29 and a close-up shot by Paul Oberhaus cut the Baltimore team's margin to eight points at the whistle.

Taken By Death—Bill Delaney, former star for the St. Louis Cardinals, is dead in Phoenix, Ariz., after a long illness. Delaney died on his 35th birthday. In the 1934 world series Delaney caught all seven games the Cards played against the Tigers.

Trail Twice By One Point—When the final stanza got under way, the locals found the range and dumped in seven consecutive points to trail at 39-38 with seven minutes yet remaining to play. Gus Frizzell started the rally with a field goal.

Bloom, the big center of the Bullets, fouled Bob Pence in the back court and after the players "had a few words" Pence stepped to the free throw line and converted his try. Lou Bell speared a long pass for a pretty close-up bank shot and Pence brought the crowd to its feet with a perfect shot from the sidelines to put the locals a single point behind.

Bloom put the Bullets three points ahead with a pretty set shot but Walter "Pooch" Orndorff cut in fast to rack up a fielder that put the Amvets only one point in the rear at 41-40. Bloom converted one of two free throws after being fouled by Orndorff to make it 42-40 with only four minutes to go.

A technical foul was plastered on the Amvets for calling a sixth time out and Bloom made good his try at the 15-second mark. Oberhaus hooked a one-pointer after McKee fouled him. After "freezing" the ball briefly, the Bullets then won the game when McKee registered two field goals in rapid succession, the first in close and the second from the sidelines. A foul goal by Oberhaus concluded the third stanza, 46-42.

It was a rough and tumble fourth period and several of the players came near letting their tempers get the best of them but no fistic encounters resulted.

Amvets Take 11 To 6 Lead—The Amvets marked up the first goal of the game when Pence heaved one through from the sidelines. Bloom tipped in a fielder to tie the score at 11-11 and another outside shot by Pence broke the deadlock.

Shot by Pence broke the deadlock. Bloom scored from the charity stripe for Baltimore and then the locals rang up seven straight points on a "sleeper" by Gus Frizzell.

Pence's foul, Bell's goal on a follow-up and Bloom's outside shot which found the target and put the locals on the long end of an 11-3 score. Fetsch meshed a foul shot and Bloom connected with a long one from the side as the quarter ended with the count 11-6 in favor of the home team.

The Bullets found themselves in the second period and overtook the Amvets at 12-11 after Tony Kelly scored a field goal, Bloom converted two free throws and Jack Ahearn connected on an overhead shot. The Bullets were never headed thereafter.

After the home team's 15-11 tally, the Bullets found themselves in the second period and overtook the Amvets at 12-11 after Tony Kelly scored a field goal, Bloom converted two free throws and Jack Ahearn connected on an overhead shot. The Bullets were never headed thereafter.

Moose Quint Bows To Amvets' Bees—Veterans Chalk Up 32-29 Win; Kauffman, Sherman Top Scorers

Coach Norman Gerdeman's Amvets Bees nosed out the Cumberland Loyol Order of Moose cagers by the score of 32 to 29 last night in the preliminary to the Baltimore Bullets-Amvets contest, at S.S. Peter and Paul gymnasium.

Both teams are represented in the Interstate League which opens its season tonight.

The Moose quint took a 9-6 lead at the quarter but trailed at the half, 20-18, and at the close of the third stanza, 26-22.

Kenny Sherman led the Amvets' scorers with six field goals while Kammauf paced the losers with 12 points on five field goals and two free throws. Lineups:

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear Mother,
Mrs. Annie Martin Michaels, who went to her rest one year ago today, Dec. 2, 1945.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is still heard,
A place is vacant in our hearts,
Which never can be filled.

God in his wisdom has recalled
The life his love has given,
And 'till her body slumbers here,
Her soul is safe in Heaven.

Paradise dear Mother is far away,
For we shall never see you more,
'Till we're raised by Christ to live
On Zion's happy shore.

Sadly missed by:
HER FAMILY
12-2-46

In loving memory of our dear mother,
Mary E. Breighner, who died eight years ago today.

O faith that is ever before us,
O voice we cannot forget,
Her smile will linger forever,
In our memories we see them yet.

As we loved her, so we miss her,
In our hearts she is so near,
Loved, remembered, longed for always,
Brings many a silent tear.

Sadly missed by:
THE FAMILY
12-2-46

In loving memory of James E. Shelton, who died six years ago today, December
2, 1940.

Tender Father hence has gone,
His loss is great to everyone;
Had we asked Him, well we know,
We should cry "O spare this blow!"

Yet with streaming tears should say,
"Lord we love him, let him stay!"
His memory is as dear today
As the hour he passed away.
